

Could Not Eat or Sleep

Vinol, our Cod Liver and Iron Tonic, gave him appetite and felt like different man.

Ruston, La. — "I am a working man and got all run down so I could not eat, sleep or work. Vinol was recommended for my condition. It built me up so I eat well, sleep well, can work all day long and not feel tired. In fact, I feel like a different man since I took it."

— JOHN H. WILSON.

"Men fret and worry." That's why they overwork, get nervous, all run down, have no appetite, and can "hardly drag around." Vinol creates a hearty appetite, induces sound sleep, invigorates the nerves, creates strength and quiets the nerves.

It is the beef and cod liver peptones contained in Vinol added by iron and glycerophosphates which makes it such a famous blood maker, nerve builder and strength creator.

BAPTISTS CONSIDER CAMPAIGN PLANS

Details for the coming campaign in the Interchurch World Movement for the Baptist denomination were made known at a conference of the Baptist churches of the northern part of New London county held in the Central Baptist church on Wednesday afternoon and evening.

At the afternoon session a committee to take charge of the work was appointed and at the evening session Rev. Peter C. Wright of Hartford was the speaker.

Encouragement instilled in those who heard unbounded enthusiasm with which they will open their campaign on April 25th and continue until May 2nd.

In his address, which was heard by large representations from practically all of the Baptist churches in the northern part of the county, Rev. Mr. Wright told how his church, the Central Baptist church of Hartford, had taken hold of the campaign and had so far secured pledges for practically one-quarter of its quota of $35,000.

Dr. Wright in his opening remarks said: "I feel as I look at the conditions in the world and in the church today as though Christ is compelling us to think in his terms. No nation today can live in isolation. We must see the world as a whole. A few years ago Spain used Cuba with much the same spirit as Germany has shown. But the United States saw the cruelty of it and we all know the result. In the early hours of the morning, prayed to God to show me the way to do this great work. In the morning I went to one of our best men in the church and talked to him. He became thoughtful and then we all met in a meeting and there in that meeting we got pledges for practically one-quarter of the amount. We thought at first that it was impossible but we have got the faith and we will raise our quota."

Let us rise to terms of Christ and we will accomplish the task.

The meeting closed by prayer by Rev. George H. Strouse of the First Baptist church.

SEUMAS MACMANUS CHARMS

WITH IRISH FOLK LORE

With the beautiful dancing yellow blaze of the turf fire in an Irish cottage pictured in imagination before the audience Wednesday evening in the hall at the Elks home, Seumas MacManus, the well known Irish writer and lecturer, charmed the packed hall with his lecture on Irish Folk Lore and Irish Poetry.

Like the Irish story teller in the chimney corner, Mr. MacManus held his audience fascinated as he disclosed with poetic touch the beauty and appeal of just a few of these thousand of folk lore tales that have been told over and over again for the last two thousand years in the green glens of Ireland.

The lecture was given under the auspices of Mercier council, Catholic Ladies of Columbian and was the first of its educational programme, as was explained by Miss Rosalie Riordan, chairman of the educational committee, who presided and introduced Mr. MacManus.

The entertainment opened with several selections in Irish song, well rendered as follows: The Minstrel Boy, Mrs. Morgan Cronin; Come Back to Erin, Miss Katherine Kirby; When Eyes Are Smiling, Mrs. Eugene Connors; Killarney, Mrs. E. E. O'Connell; Believe Me, Miss Eleanor Donovan.

The beautiful art of story telling has never been forgotten or neglected in Ireland, said Mr. MacManus as he opened his lecture. The story teller ranked third in the land, coming next after the poet who ranked second to the king and the story teller travelled around with a numerous retinue, well come everywhere. Not a hillside nor glen but had its story told. Modern Ireland has lost none of its love and reverence for the story teller and his art.

The lecturer went on to illustrate the different types of folk lore, heroic, romantic and fairy tales, all beautiful tales which he said he had heard told hundreds of times as a child, a youth and the mountain school master, the proud position to which he attained when he was eight years of age, which he reached the height of his ambition, to return as principal, assistant principal, monitor and janitor to the school where he had received his own education, and at the magnificent remuneration of $125 a year.

Wherever you meet an Irishman you meet a hero, for the Irish youth have been fed and bred upon heroic tales, and as a late of Connel Caragh, captain of the Red Branch Knights, which Mr. MacManus told in illustration of the hero tales.

The beautiful faith in the fairies still remains in the Irish people, declared the lecturer, as he told of dozens among the mountains of Ireland who have seen the fairies. In a sympathetic spirit he held the close attention of his audience he related the story of How the Fairies Came to Ireland. Irish folk lore makes the fairies angels who remained neutral in the fight between Michael and Lucifer and as penalty were banished from heaven, but were given their choice where they wanted to go. "Send us to Ireland, the nearest place to heaven," they said to Michael, and he took them to Ireland. The Irish people feel sympathy for these fairy folk and still hope that God will call them back to heaven. Irish fairies are helpful and as penalty were given punishment where punishment is needed.

At this point Mr. MacManus introduced to his audience the wonderful deeds of the "little red man" of the Irish folk tale as he related with a delicious touch of the brogue the tale of Fair-haired John and the humorous children's fairy tale of Connel O'Donnell and the "little red fellow" who shod his horse at Connel's forge.

Passing on to mention the Irish proverb, the lecturer said the nation was particularly rich in this respect

Use Coconut Oil For Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Multisided coconut oil shampoo (which is pure and entirely greaseless) is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonsful will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get Multisided coconut oil shampoo at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

When a young man is convinced that there is nothing too good for a girl he offers himself to her.

CARD OF THANKS.

I take this means of publicly expressing my gratitude for the many kind and thoughtful attentions given me in my bereavement, the loss of my beloved wife. I wish to thank the members of the Catholic Women's club and the members of the Rosary society, and all others who sent such beautiful flowers to my home, all treasure each kindly act in the confines of my memory while life endures.
